"Under Cover," and
"It Pays to Advertise"

YOU will forget that you are you, in following the fortunes of the gallant Irishman, Larry Redmond, and his lady-love, in this novel. Often you will smile. Sometimes you will laugh aloud. Again your heart will leap under the thrill of stirring happenings. And now and then—if you are a man—you will swallow hard, once or twice; and if you are a woman, a tear or two will come stealing down your cheek. Here is sheer romance, secured for you, which will be printed in installments in this paper.

This is one story you don't want to miss.
